

Homework in Kindergarten

Your Elephant will work hard every day and will more than likely go home very tired. Therefore, homework will not be officially assigned. You may be asked approximately once a month to help out with a special or seasonal home project.

I ask that you spend your evenings doing things that are proven to correlate with student success. Eat dinner as a family, read together (reading with your child is the most important thing you can do to build strong literacy skills), play outside, and get your child to bed early.

Sight words are the words early readers most often encounter. "T.R.I.C.K.Y" words, or sight words, are important in early reading development because they represent high-frequency words and are difficult to sound out. See below for a master list of our words. If your child masters all 42 words, we will continue to move them on to new lists.
